

FIG. 5.2 Semiconductor-like resistance thermometers. The resistance vs. temperature curves of these sensors have a negative slope. They are significantly more sensitive than metallic resistance thermometers in the temperature range below about  $\sim 77$  K.